Putin tests Russian power on Belgrade visit

Vladimir Putin will be using his forthcoming visit to Serbia to showcase Russia's continuing influence in Eastern Europe, experts say.

Gordana ANDRIĆ

Serbia is preparing a red-carpet welcome for Russian President Vladimir Putin on October 16, promising a victory parade on a scale not seen in decades.

Putin's visit and the parade form part of celebrations marking the 70th anniversary of the liberation of Belgrade from Nazi German occupation.

"President Putin is coming as a representative of the army that participated in the liberation of Belgrade," said Mihajlo Drecun, one of the organisers of the parade, recalling the key role of the Soviet Red Army in 1944. "We also invited veterans from other allied countries," he added.

Talk show’s death raises fears for Serbia media

B92's decision to ditch the iconic politics show 'Utisak Nedelje' has raised a storm in Serbia among journalists and media observers.

"It looks as if the Socialists will go home at 5pm sharp and don't hope too much," he concluded.

With 769,000 people officially seeking jobs in Serbia - an unemployment rate of 26.4 per cent - Parković is one of many people who are content to work without contracts, as long as they get paid.

A recent survey of the labour force showed that around a fifth of all those in work in Serbia work in the grey or 'shadow' economy, which means they do not show up in job statistics.

Estimates about the total number of people working in the grey economy in Serbia range from around 400,000 to as much as 700,000.

Experts agree that a strengthened system of inspections is one way to tackle the phenomenon.

Serbia’s ‘grey’ economy resists reform

Reducing the grey or shadow economy could add millions of euros to Serbia’s budget - but the results so far have not been encouraging.

Belgrade named cheapest European destination

Serbian capital tops the list of the most affordable tourist destinations in Europe, says a new survey by German automobile club ADAC

With daily tourist expenses of around 20 euros, Belgrade is the cheapest European city for tourists, the latest survey by German automobile club ADAC has shown. In the capital of Serbia, tourists can pay for public transport, go on a guided tour, eat in a Belgrade restaurant and buy souvenirs for around 30 euros. The study is the result of a survey conducted by ADAC’s research team, which compares the prices of tourist attractions, museums, restaurants, public transport, hotels and other services, as well as changes tourist demand during the new season.

The capital of Serbia was the cheapest city on the ADAC list, followed by Tallinn (Estonia), Vilnius (Lithuania) and Riga (Latvia). In Belgrade, tourists spend an average of 20 euros a day, while in Tallinn, the amount is 30 euros. The survey was conducted during the spring season, from May 1 to May 30, and included 20 cities throughout Europe. The study showed that Belgrade is significantly cheaper than other European destinations, with prices for tourist attractions, museums, restaurants and public transport being significantly lower than in other cities.

Belgrade is ranked as the cheapest European destination in the ADAC survey, which compares tourist prices in 20 cities across Europe. The survey found that Belgrade is significantly cheaper than other European destinations, with prices for tourist attractions, museums, restaurants and public transport being significantly lower than in other cities.
Serbia’s ‘grey’ economy resists reform

ECONOMY

REDEFINING THE SHADOW ECONOMY

The government introduced its new anti-grey economic package in an attempt to boost economic growth and reduce the size of the shadow economy. The package includes increased penalties for businesses that operate illegally and the introduction of a new tax on the sale of unregistered goods. The government also plans to increase the number of inspections of businesses, with the aim of reducing the size of the shadow economy. The package has been welcomed by many entrepreneurs, who believe it will help to reduce the size of the shadow economy and improve the country’s competitiveness. However, some economists warn that the package may not be enough to tackle the problem of the shadow economy.

IMPROVING REGULATION

Some observers argue that the government needs to do more to improve the regulatory framework for businesses. They point to the need for clearer and more predictable regulations, as well as better enforcement of existing laws. The government has pledged to increase the number of inspections of businesses, but many entrepreneurs say that this is not enough.

REVENGE OF THE ENTREPRENEURS

Some entrepreneurs have said that the government’s anti-grey economic package is not enough to tackle the problem of the shadow economy. They argue that the government needs to do more to improve the regulatory framework for businesses and increase the number of inspections of businesses. They also warn that the government needs to do more to reduce the size of the shadow economy.

Dining in and out - at the same time

It always begins with a simple question: Can you bring me the wine list? Everything else that follows is a complex matter, and it is measured only by how much is left in the bottle after dinner.

Touch of Berlin at Ludost

This busy modern bar is often confused with the adjoining venue at Mladost - but it has a personality all of its own.

With the minimum distance down to a close neighbour of the city night club, Ludost has no problem at all standing out. You can sit in a comfortable lounge area, with the best of the bars on the market in mind when checking them out.

Ludost is one of the best new places to go at night, as Ludost, as many people imagine that this is a place forcoffee and cigarettes, Ludost is a good place to relax and enjoy the company of others. The club has a nice bar with a wide range of drinks, as well as a large, open dance floor. The music is usually a mix of electronic and rock, with occasional performances by local bands.

The club is narrow, but long. A long bar runs down one side and leather booths run down the other. There is a little leftover room for people to dance and drink. The atmosphere is reminiscent of most nightclubs in Belgrade, with a casual and relaxed feel.

This popular place is a weekend and there is a good chance that you will not be able to get in on Friday or Saturday if you come after midnight.

Belgrade finally gets a musical nostalgia fest

The Belgrade capital will finally have its own international Tattoo Festival, featuring some of the best tattoo artists from around the world and the competition from October 7th to 13th.

No matter what style of tattooing you prefer, you will find it here at the festival. From traditional Polynesian to modern, there is something for everyone.

To check out all the tattooing styles and participate in the contest, visit the official website to find out more details.

A night of 1990s musical nostalgia

The 1990s in Serbia were not as exciting as some people believe. However, the decade did leave a lasting impression on the music scene. There were some great concerts and bands that helped shape the music scene.

One of the most popular bands from the 1990s is the Belgrade-based band, Nova Vatra. The band was known for its catchy tunes and fun performances.

The best of the 1990s will be on display at the Tattoo Festival, with performances from some of the most popular bands from the decade.

Belgrade basketball clubs start European competitions

As the new European basketball season is about to kick off, Belgrade’s Partizan and Red Star basketball clubs hope to have a good season despite financial issues.

Belgrade’s Partizan and Red Star basketball clubs are two of the most successful in Europe and are always in the running for the top spots in the league.

However, the teams have been struggling financially in recent years, with Partizan facing a $4 million debt and Red Star facing a $5 million debt.

Despite these challenges, both clubs are hoping to compete at the highest level in the upcoming season.

For Partizan, the most pressing issue is the financial one. The club has been struggling to find enough money to pay its players and staff.

Red Star, on the other hand, is facing a more immediate problem. The club has been in debt for several years and has been unable to pay its players and staff.

Belgrade basketball fans

Fans from Kosovo have expressed their wish to go to Belgrade to support the Albanian national team in a football match against Serbia - but it is not clear whether they will be allowed into the stadium.

Serbia faces dilemma over Kosovo football fans

Fans from Kosovo have expressed their wish to go to Belgrade to support the Albanian national team in a football match against Serbia - but it is not clear whether they will be allowed into the stadium.

FIFA's ban on Kosovo� s national team has meant that games are being played in neutral venues. However, some fans from Kosovo have expressed their desire to support their team in Belgrade.

The Belgrade government has not yet made a decision on whether to allow Kosovo football fans into the stadium.

Serbia has been a member of FIFA since 1921, but Kosovo has only been recognized as a separate country in 2008.

As a result, the Serbian Football Association has blocked Kosovo from playing home games in Belgrade.

However, some fans from Kosovo have expressed their desire to support their team in Belgrade.
